

6. 47. 7, 9; (6) On the sixth day, Yavanas were among those who were posted at the right wing of the Krauñcavyūha (6. 71. 14) of the Kauravas (dakṣiṇam pakṣam āśritya sthītā vyūhasya) 6. 71. 20; (7) On the eighth day, Trigarta, accompanied by thousands of Yavanas, followed Bṛhadbala in the Mahāvyūha (6. 83. 9) of Kauravas 6. 83. 10; (8) On the eleventh day, Yavanas and Śakas riding swift horses guarded the extreme end (prapakṣa) of the left wing of the Śakaṭavyūha (7. 6. 15) of the Kauravas (savyam pārśvam apālayan) 7. 6. 4-5; that day, Dhṛtarāṣṭra, while recounting Kṛṣṇa's past exploits, mentioned his victory over Yavanas and their followers (yavanāṁ ca sahānugān) 7. 10. 18; (9) On the twelfth day, Yavanas were posted at the neck (grīvāyām) of the Suparṇavyūha (7. 19. 4) of the Kauravas 7. 19. 7; (10) On the fourteenth day, Arjuna killed hundreds of thousands of Yavanas (śatasahasraśaḥ) 7. 68. 41, 43; on that day, striking Yavanas holding bows and arrows in their hands and wearing armours, led by Duryodhana faced Sātyaki to fight with him; but Sātyaki was going to kill them all, foot-soldiers and those driving in chariots or riding elephants along with their horses and elephants, and break their chariots, (yatraite satanutrāṇāḥ suyodhanapurogamāḥ / ... śarabāṇāsanadharā yavanāḥ ca prahāriṇaḥ) 7. 95. 11-14; when Sātyaki reached the Yavanas, many of them, quick in action (laghuhaṣṭāś ca) showered arrows on him; Sātyaki cut off their arrows and missiles; he also cut off their arms and heads; his arrows pierced through their steel armours (śaṅkyāyasāni varmāni)

and went through their bodies; dead, they fell down on the ground by hundreds 7. 95. 31-36; Sātyaki killed five, six, seven or even eight (pañca śaḥ sapta cāṣṭau ca) of them at a time with his arrows 7. 95. 37; thus Sātyaki routed (vidrāvya) the large army of Yavanas and proceeded towards Arjuna 7. 95. 45; 7. 96. 1; at the instance of Duryodhana and led by him Yavanas returned to fight once again with Sātyaki and attacked him (te punaḥ samnyavartanta ... / parām yuddhe matim kṛtvā putrasya tava śāsanāt ||) 7. 97. 12-14; (10) On the seventeenth day Yavanas, in chariots and on horse-backs and their footsoldiers, stood at the extreme end of left side of the Bārhaspatyavyūha (8. 31. 26) of Kauravas and, as directed by Karṇa, challenged Arjuna and Kṛṣṇa (vāmam pārśvam apālayan / ... teṣāṁ prapakṣaḥ ... śakāś ca yavanāḥ saha || nideśāt sūtaputrasya sarathāḥ sāśvapattayaḥ / āhva-yanto 'rjunam tasthuḥ keśavam ca ... ||) 8. 31. 14-16; at the instance of Śakuni, three thousand Yavanas, honoured by the brave, holding śaktis, ṛṣṭis, and prāsas in their hands attacked Bhīma; when beaten and slashed by Bhīma with sword, they raised a loud roar (tāḍitānām ca sarvaśaḥ / asibhiś chīdyamānānām) 8. 35. 37; Arjuna attacked the extreme end (of the left side of) the vyūha (8. 40. 99-100, 110) and fought with Kāmbojas, Yavanas and Śakas who rode horses; they were all smeared with blood (yavanaiḥ ... / śonitāktaiś tadā raktam sarvam āśid ...) 8. 40. 108; Kṛṣṇa told Arjuna that no one else but he (Arjuna) could conquer Yavanas and others who had joined hands with Kauravas for the sake of Duryodhana (ete duryodhana-