

dried up the lustre of the eminent and very strong Pāñcāla princes (pāñcālānām ca ye śreṣṭhā rājaputrā mahābalāḥ / teṣāṃ ādatta tejāmsi) 6. 105. 31; Bhīṣma suggested to Yudhiṣṭhira, who was close to him, that if he desired Bhīṣma to be killed, Arjuna, Pāñcālas and Śrñjayas should jointly lead the attack on him; accordingly Arjuna, along with Pāñcālas and Cedis, and led by Śikhaṇḍin, marched towards Bhīṣma 6. 111. 15, 26; Bhīṣma in his battle with Matsyas and Pāñcālas, alone, killed innumerable elephants and horses, seven great chariot-fighters, and in addition five thousand chariot-fighters and fourteen thousand footsoldiers 6. 113. 21-22; when Bhīṣma killed seven great chariot-fighters, there arose a great roar (kilakilāśabdaḥ) among Pāñcālas and others who, riding horses, chariots, elephants, and also those who fought on foot attacked Bhīṣma 6. 113. 46-48; when Bhīṣma fell, Pāñcālas blew conches 6. 114. 107; at his fall in the evening of the tenth day (sāyāhne) Pāñcālas were delighted 6. 115. 7; (46) In the summary narration of the events which occurred while Droṇa was the general of the Kaurava army, it is mentioned that the large army of Pāñcālas was scattered by Droṇa when he agitated it and penetrated it (samkṣobhyamānā droṇena bhidyamānā mahācamūḥ); they, led by Dhṛṣṭadyumna, trembled (samakampanta) while they got killed by Droṇa 7. 6. 34, 36; whenever Pāñcālas attacked Droṇa he killed them along with their horses and broke their chariots; ultimately Pāñcālas killed Droṇa by doing evil and cruel deeds (pāñcālair aśivaiḥ krūrakarmabhiḥ / hato rukmaratho rājan kṛtvā karma suduṣkaram ||) 7. 7. 20-21, 32; (47) On the eleventh day, Pāñcālas attacked the warriors led by Aśvatthāman who attacked Draupadī's sons 7. 15. 11; at the end of that day, they praised Arjuna when he declared the end of the war for the day 7. 15. 50; (48) On the twelfth day, Pāñcālas attacked Droṇa; he scattered them away and repeatedly defeated them 7. 20. 18-19, 23; when a Pāñcāla prince (pāñcālya, not named) was killed by Droṇa, Pāñcālas attacked Droṇa shouting 'kill Droṇa, kill Droṇa'; in the fierce battle, Droṇa threw the excessively angered Pāñcālas (bhṛṣasaṃkrudhān) into disorder 7. 20. 46, 48-49; Pāñcālas, getting killed by Droṇa, trembled (samakampanta) 7. 20. 53; they were broken (bhagna) by Droṇa 7. 21. 1; pierced by Droṇa's arrows, they were thrown back from their positions (calitān); Duryodhana pointed out to Karṇa Droṇa's feat and described the plight of Pāñcālas 7. 21. 7, 11-14; Pāñcālas gathered around Bhīma 7. 21. 23; of the twelve thousand great warriors of Pāñcālas six thousand followed Śikhaṇḍin 7. 22. 14; the remaining six thousand Prabhadrakas (Pāñcālas), riding chariots, with raised weapons and stretched bows, and making death as their common goal (samānamṛtyavo bhūtvā) followed Dhṛṣṭadyumna 7. 22. 36-37; Bhagadatta was encircled by Yudhiṣṭhira and Pāñcālas; Bhagadatta, riding his elephant, scattered them away; he forced them to run away 7. 25. 24, 26, 41; Pāñcālas, shouting '(attack) Droṇa' (droṇam droṇam iti ... pāñcālāḥ samacodayan) incited one other; wherever Droṇa attacked the group of Pāñcāla chariot-fighters, Dhṛṣṭadyumna went to their help